Is there life during law school? The question, immortalized on bumper stickers, is asked by almost every law student and can be answered with a few simple observations.

When Professor Silverman scans his class roster looking for the "victim of the day", the terror felt by his students in attendance indicated life in the classroom. When Professor Resnick asks "Is there a contract?" and gets no response and then shouts "But it's April! You should know this by now!", that sinking feeling you got was proof-positive of life in the classroom. Clearly there was life during our moot court oral argument. The rush of adrenaline, shaking of knees, sweat on the palms, and hollow feeling of your stomach dropping to your knees were all signs of life.

Aside from the extremely stressful situations there were other things that proved there was a better side to life at school. Friends, speaker programs, clubs, organizations, clinics, and intramurals all helped to improve the quality of life at Hofstra Law.

When one observes students talking and laughing in the lounges, working on crossword puzzles, reading the local newspaper, gossiping, and trashing the lobby, there is a definite feeling of life.

One of the best examples of life during law school are the world renowned law school parties which one routinely covered by the press. How about those end of the semester events when the sky's the limit? That's life!

There is also a feeling of community and camaraderie when students pull together in rooting for the World Champion Mets and Giants, donating food and clothing for the poor, and supporting the various school organizations by attending a lecture or helping with a fundraiser. After all what would law school be like if PAD and BLSA didn't sell bagels and real coffee?

The answer to "Is there life during law school?" is an emphatic YES!
Friends
The Daily Grind . . .
Hangin' Out
Rest & Relaxation
Phi Alpha Delta
Barrister's Dinner
S.G.A. 2nd Annual Party
S.G.A. Barbeque
Real Life Experience
NLO strives towards justice for all

Professor Kubitschek

Rosemarie Maldonado — Clinical Professor
Criminal Justice Clinic Mock Trial