Greetings Readers:

The production of this momento was a labor of love taken on by a handful of graduates who took time out of their already laden schedules to put it all together. As Editor-in-Chief, I can only take credit for a very small portion of the work that went into this yearbook. My job was made simple by the toil of a very enthusiastic group. I’d like to take this opportunity to thank my Pocket Part co-workers for their time, energy, and tireless efforts. My sincere thanks go to Michele Marone, Diane Proimos, and Leslie Sobel for their countless hours of layout, typing, sales, photography, and whatever else it took get the job done. These creative individuals did more than their fair share and I am forever grateful. I also extend special thanks to Fran Krejci for her tremendous assistance, and to Tierre Jeanne for her organizational skills (a personal note, thank you Tierre for being such a fervent believer in me — your friendship is invaluable). Last but not least, thanks to Jeff Taylor and Dana Williams for their photographic contributions.

Congratulations to the Class of 1988! May you seek truth and justice with the same tenacity of purpose that lead to this wonderful achievement. God Bless you all and Good Luck on the bar.

Sincerely,

PAMELA D. FAISON
Editor-in-Chief
