

1994

PANEL I: A LEGISLATIVE PERSPECTIVE ON TELEVISION AND VIOLENCE

Follow this and additional works at: <http://scholarlycommons.law.hofstra.edu/hlr>

Part of the Law Commons

Recommended Citation

(1994) "PANEL I: A LEGISLATIVE PERSPECTIVE ON TELEVISION AND VIOLENCE," Hofstra Law Review: Vol. 22: Iss. 4, Article 2.

Available at: <http://scholarlycommons.law.hofstra.edu/hlr/vol22/iss4/2>

This document is brought to you for free and open access by Scholarly Commons at Hofstra Law. It has been accepted for inclusion in Hofstra Law Review by an authorized administrator of Scholarly Commons at Hofstra Law. For more information, please contact lawcls@hofstra.edu.

PANEL I: A LEGISLATIVE PERSPECTIVE ON TELEVISION AND VIOLENCE

Panel I will discuss the issue of television and violence in terms of the legislation that has been proposed to deal with the problem. The panelists are:

John Windhausen, who currently works for the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation. Mr. Windhausen has helped draft what is known as the Hollings Bill, which is the Children's Protection from Violent Programming Act.¹ He will discuss the Hollings Bill and its goals. Mr. Windhausen graduated from UCLA Law School, has worked for the Federal Communications Commission and is currently working for the Senate communications subcommittee.

Arthur Eisenberg is the legal director of the New York Civil Liberties Union. Mr. Eisenberg attended Cornell Law School and has been an adjunct professor at Cardozo Law School for many years.

Kathleen Peratis is a partner in the Manhattan law firm of Frank & Peratis. She graduated from the University of Southern California Law Center, and has practiced law for many years—primarily representing plaintiffs in employment discrimination and other civil rights matters.

1. S. 1383, 103d Cong., 1st Sess. (1993).

