The Penalty of Indifference

The lawyer who is indifferent to the need of keeping fully informed regarding cases and statutes on which he proposes to rely is very likely to be penalized by embarrassment and loss of prestige.

Under present conditions no one can compete successfully who overlooks the most efficient and economical way of keeping up to date and getting things done.

This is why Shepard's Citations is particularly important now. It not only increases speed, cuts costs and insures accuracy but it also brings every other legal publication up to date.

Subscribers know from experience that the small cost involved is offset many times by the benefits they receive from the service. They also know that with Shepard's Citations at their disposal they are not likely to suffer the Penalty of Indifference.
